SCHOOLS HARD AT WORK FOR VOTES

Contest for Times-Dispatch Art Collections Arouses Pupils in Every Section.

MANY PAY VISIT TO OFFICE

Mr. Clarke Strongly Commends Work, and Predicts Great Benefits to Children.

Still they come—more votes, more art.

The contest for the Times-Dispatch art collections is proving one of the most interesting events of the season for the pupils of Richmond.

But Central School gets first! was the way one boy expressed his opinion of the purpose of the pupils of that school.

"Thank our room would look a long night letter with some of these pretty things in it," was the verdict of another boy of another school.

Some of the most faithful visitors to "headquarters" in the Times-Dispatch Building are the girls of the Leitch school. Miss Brinkman is always delighted to welcome her youthful visitors and very glad to see how much they appreciate the offer of the Times-Dispatch in giving so many beautiful reproductions of the masterpieces in sculpture to the pupils.

Mr. A. B. Clarke, of the school board, was an interested visitor to the office of the contest secretary.

"I am an advocate of beautiful things in the schools," were his words.

Mr. Clarke thinks the pupils will be proud of the work and prize the victory gained in placing their schools among the winners.

Influence of Art.

Mr. Paul Kersch, who has written and lectured extensively upon the subject of sculpture, in an essay upon "The Influence of Art Upon the Life of Our Nation," says:

"There is only one great power in education, it is the most powerful. If we can only give outside outlet for this powerful factor in every life, we have done the very thing which is the basis of the most noble social problem. How can we do this better than by surrounding our children and youth in their schools at least with the best and most perfect products of art? Here the influence of art is required. For the spirit of beauty, harmony and grace is so closely and directly connected with the mind, that the appreciation of them comes almost as unconsciously as the recognition of the truth. The home in training and developing the imagination and artistic taste the presence of artistic objects is the chief requirement."

McGuire's at Work.

McGuire's School again put down to business and exhibited the following "Golden Moments" in their art collection. The school is now in the midst of a contest for the Times-Dispatch art collections. ## "BOB" TAYLOR TALKS ABOUT AIR CASTLES Tennessee "Apostle of Sunshine" Delivers Brilliant Lecture.

FIRST OF Y. M. C. A. COURSE

Eloquence, Song and Story Entertain Large and Appreciative Audience.

Before an audience that filled every seat in the Y. M. C. A. Hall last night, former Governor Robert L. Taylor, of Tennessee, delivered the first lecture of the association course, and for more than an hour the brilliant orator held his hearers as if by magic.

"The Apostle of Sunshine," as Governor Taylor is known among his native Tennesseeans, was presented by his personal friend, Rev. Dr. J. B. Hawthorne, who referred to him as "the best known, the most popular, the most distinguished, and the best loved man in the old volunteer State," and the lecturer, heavy, interspersed now and then with song and story.

Governor Taylor graciously thanked Dr. Hawthorne for his complimentary introduction, and expressed the hope that he might live to be one hundred and fifty years old, and then be borne on angelic wings to his last reward.

The subject of the lecture was "Castles in the Air," and from every bright line of his face, the speaker, he drew some valuable and instructive moral, with which he fairly placed the hearts of his hearers.

"When a man is in high public position," he commenced, "he should be dignified, but when on the lecture platform he should play his role."

"I shall endeavor to play mine tonight, and, weaving together a few stories from all my lectures, I shall call it 'Castles in the Air,' and immediately he started in to amuse and to instruct, often provoking outbursts of laughter by his auditors.

Began With Humor.

The speaker said he had seen an ant dragging a dead grasshopper to his little den, and declared that if man were played like a strong in comparison, he would hardly know his power. After naming many other things he could do, Governor Taylor concluded his audience with laughter by concluding, "He could with his hands turn down the capital at Washington, and crash out Congress and oh what a glorious day that would be for the Democratic party."

The picture of his dream of paradise was eloquent and beautiful, but before he had completed the thought the speaker could not resist the temptation to dash in a bit of humor. In the midst of the freshness and beauty of the dream, he saw, and declared there was not a cloud in it, but a false tooth nor a bald head in sight."

"We pass from the miracle of birth," he said, "to the miracle of death, building castles in the air, and all the pleasure and happiness there is in it, is to be free from that mysterious word of death."

Governor Taylor's description of the epitaphs of the country was interpreted with humor and pathos.

Pleaded For the Boys.

He characterized him as the "moral emperor of our air and civilization; the emperor of the breakfast dinner and supper table, the emperor of the playground, and the emperor of the business of the day."

"Ladies and gentlemen, be patient with your children, for if for the angels don't steal him, the world will not be a better place. I had rather buy a striped bag of marbles to a child than two bags of gold for them to scramble over when I'm dead."

"If life is a dream, why not make it a happy dream?"

"There is happiness enough in the world for all, I believe in the gospel of sunshine and the religion of love. Forgive ladies and young gentlemen, it is noble to dream, and to build castles in the air. But when your dreams explode and your castles fall to the ground, it is mean and cowardly to sulk on the world and shoot poisoned arrows at those built by others."

A Pathetic Story.

In entering upon his gospel of sunshine Governor Taylor told a pathetic story of a boy who had been in the hospital for some time.

"As I sat one Christmas Eve in the Executive office as Governor of the old volunteer State," he said, "a man entered and handed me a letter."

"I am directed," he declared, "to present you with this letter, which is a letter from a boy who has been in the hospital for some time."

"He has no money and no influential friends," he said, "and he is very poor."

"He has no money and no influential friends," he said, "and he is very poor."

"He has no money and no influential friends," he said, "and he is very poor."

Matters are quiet in military circles, only the periodic drills of the various companies occurring, besides the inspections of companies by the battalion commanders.

GOT FIFTEEN YEARS.

Negro Charged With Assault and Robbery Severely Punished.

In the Hastings Court yesterday a jury administered a heavy punishment upon Reed Morton, alias Morton Reed, a negro, indicted for highway robbery. Morton, who is a large and powerful man, was convicted of robbing and cutting a stranger named William Johnson, taking from him more than $50. The penalty imposed by the jury is fifteen years imprisonment, the limit of the law being eighteen years. But for the presence in the courtroom of the aged parents of the prisoner, who are very feeble, Prince Edward might have gone the limit.

The Hastings Court has shown no mercy to burglars, housebreakers and highwaymen at this time, having sent up two prisoners for fifteen years and one for fourteen.
